Repairs Made at The Cameron Spring Improving Village Water Supply—Schools Reopened—Personals

The village has reason to rejoice that the needed work at the reservoir and Cameron spring has been done. The dam had been repaired and extended as the old one had given way in places causing a leakage from the reservoir. The spring house has been rebuilt to prevent surface water running into the spring, and all the land has been enclosed with a barbed wire fence. Now it only remains to connect the new spring brought two years ago, with the Cameron spring and the village will have an abundant supply of pure water, as the two springs are classified by the state board of health as "pure and uncontaminated" which is the highest classification.
